ORDER DISMISSING APPEAL

This is a proper person appeal from amended judgments of conviction entered in district court case number C188025. Eighth Judicial District Court, Clark County; Sally L. Loehrer, Judge.

On March 12, 2004, the district court entered a judgment of conviction for sixteen counts relating to the sexual assault of victim Weishaar and subsequent unauthorized use of her credit card in district court case number C188025. In that same case number, the district court entered a second judgment of conviction on June 8, 2004, for eight counts relating to the sexual assault of victim Dyson—including one count of battery with the use of a deadly weapon. On direct appeal, this court reversed the conviction for the count of battery with the use of a deadly weapon, but affirmed the judgments of conviction in all other respects.¹

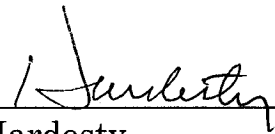

On August 13, 2007, the district court entered amended judgments of conviction, and in the amended judgment of conviction relating to Dyson, the district court amended the judgment of conviction to reflect that the battery count was removed.

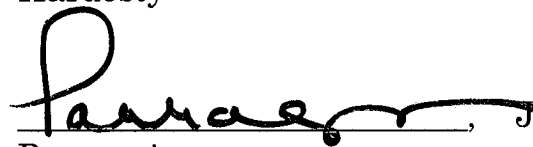

¹Nolan v. State, 122 Nev. 363, 132 P.3d 564 (2006).

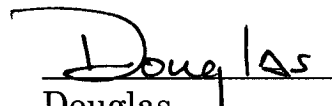

On August 20, 2007, appellant filed a notice of appeal in the district court from the amended judgments of conviction. In his notice of appeal, appellant stated that the district court added more counts and added habitual criminal and various assault counts. Appellant sought the removal of any additional counts.

This court's review of this appeal reveals a jurisdictional defect. The amended judgments of conviction did not add any additional counts. Rather, as noted above, the district court amended the judgment of conviction relating to Dyson to reflect the reversal of the battery count. No other substantive changes were made to either judgment of conviction. Because appellant is not an aggrieved party, we
