ORDER OF AFFIRMANCE

This is an appeal from a district court order revoking probation. Second Judicial District Court, Washoe County; Lidia Stiglich, Judge.

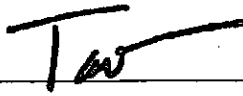

Appellant Jorge Torres, Jr. claims the district court's decision to revoke his probation was arbitrary, capricious, and/or an abuse of discretion because he provided the court with a sufficient basis to overcome the State's argument that he was unsupervisable, he "had taken positive steps in changing his life," "he continue[d] to have the support of his family and was central to providing support for them," and his relatively minor probation violations did not warrant imposition of the original prison sentence.

The decision to revoke probation is within the broad discretion of the district court and will not be disturbed absent a clear showing of abuse. Lewis v. State, 90 Nev. 436, 438, 529 P.2d 796, 797 (1974). Evidence supporting a decision to revoke probation must be merely sufficient to reasonably satisfy the district court that the conduct of the probationer was not as good as required by the conditions of probation. Id.

Here, Torres admitted he violated the conditions of his probation by failing to maintain steady and gainful employment, meet his financial obligations, and submit to a substance abuse evaluation. Torres also admitted he had been arrested pursuant to bench warrants issued by the Sparks Municipal Court. Based on these admissions, we conclude the district court could reasonably find Torres' conduct was not as good as required by the conditions of his probation, and, therefore, it did not abuse its discretion by revoking his probation. Accordingly, we

ORDER the judgment of the district court AFFIRMED.
