ORDER OF AFFIRMANCE

This proper person appeal challenges an order of the district court concerning child custody. The district court has broad discretionary power in determining questions of child custody, and this court will not disturb the district court's determinations absent a clear abuse of discretion.¹ The record reveals that the child, who is approximately seventeen years old, returned to live with respondent in August 2000 and has apparently remained with him. It further appears that the child disclosed during the Family Mediation Center interview that she wanted to remain with respondent. Also, the child complained that appellant was embarrassing her because appellant kept coming to the child's workplace and bothering her. Having reviewed the record on appeal, we conclude that the district court did not abuse its discretion. Accordingly, we

ORDER the judgment of the district court AFFIRMED.
