ORDER DISMISSING APPEAL

This is a proper person appeal from an order setting aside entry of default and permitting appellant to file an amended complaint. Respondent filed a motion to dismiss the appeal for lack of jurisdiction, to which appellant has submitted an opposition.¹ Our review of the documents before us reveals that we lack jurisdiction over this appeal. First, no appeal may be taken from an order setting aside a default.² Second, an order granting leave to file an amended complaint is not a final ¹Although appellant was not granted leave to file papers in proper person, see NRAP 46(b), we have considered the proper person documents received from him, and deny the relief requested therein as moot in light of this order.
